

Supplemental Educational Services (SES)

Under No Child Left Behind (NCLB), some students in schools that have been identified as “in need of improvement” are eligible for Supplemental Educational Services (SES). According to federal guidelines, these services are for tutoring instruction in reading and math. These services are provided before school or after school, on weekends, or during the summer.

If a child is eligible for SES services, the district will pay for these services with the federal funds that the district receives for this purpose. There is no charge to you for SES tutoring. These services are another way to improve the learning of students.

To be eligible for SES, a student must attend a Title I school that has not met “Adequate Yearly Progress” goals for two or more years in a row. In addition, the family must meet income eligibility guidelines.

The school will contact you if your child is eligible for SES services. If eligible, the school will provide you with a list of approved SES providers for the state of NH. This list will describe the services that each provider provides. Once you have chosen a provider, they will work closely with you and the school to make sure that it is helping your child in reading/and or mathematics.

If the school’s level of funding is insufficient to provide SES to each student whose parents request these services, the school district must first give priority those students with the lowest achievement.
